

KMG Global Crew and Editorial Talent

KMG Global Crew and Editorial talent is a global directory for specialist natural history filmmakers. KMG works with topside and underwater DoP's, camera operators, 2nd camera, assistants, drone pilots, safety support, fixers, researchers, assistant producers and producer/ directors.

This free of charge suggestion service supports production companies to work more efficiently when looking for specialist skill sets, and more sustainably when looking for location crew.

How it works

In short – you let KMG know the job role, skills, and experience that you are looking for, and KMG will send you suitable suggestions, where you can then get directly in touch with crew / editorial talent! All information is kept confidential and NDA's can be signed where requested.

The KMG directory holds detailed profiles including location, skills, experience, CV's, showreels, credits, etc. All crews and editorial talent are vetted by KMG.

Where suitable suggestions are found in response to a job enquiry, KMG will pass on the crew / editorial talents details to the production company, where the production can reach out directly. After this KMG is no longer involved. KMG members are alerted to say their information has been passed to a production, but never with details as to who, to maintain production confidentiality.

Key Features of the KMG Global Directory

- KMG has a custom designed app for crew and editorial talent to input highly detailed information on their skills, experience, qualifications, kit, area and species specialisms, etc, where only relevant information is sent to the production in response to a job enquiry.
- This platform is carefully managed and KMG keeps in touch with members to ensure all information is kept updated, and is always looking for new crew and editorial talent.
